I rec'd Dr. Caswell, Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy, Brown University, Providence, R. I.—Rev. and Dear Sir. Allow me to call your attention to the annexed table of the month commencing January 1, 1817, and ending December 31, 1836, a period of forty successive years. The building in which the account has been kept, R. J. Taylor, in 1835, and who continues in the same place. The table has been compiled with perfect accuracy and great labor door, always with Western exposure. The question, as to the comparative heat and cold at Providence and in Newport, is one which gentlemen Aware that for several years you have been a constant observer of the Thermometer at Providence, and believing that you will be able to find an public, through the Providence Journal, with the results that you may obtain. In this manner, the comparative difference in given in the simplest form of fractional reading; as, for example, in the first result, the figures 28,29, show that for January, 1817, the average of With great respect, I am yours,

MURDER OF DR. HARVEY BURDELL.—The Mysterious tragedy which terminated in the murder of Dr. Burdell has caused the greatest excitement in New York, and up to Thursday last, no clue had been discovered by which the perpetrators of this foul crime could be detected, although every means within the reach of the civil authorities had apparently been resorted to, and the coroners inquest had been conducted in a manner to elicit every minute particular that could possibly tend to the development of any facts which may finally terminate in the criminalization of the guilty parties.

The victim of this horrid assassination was a wealthy and influential citizen, and what ever might have been the principles which governed his private life, he was outwardly much respected as a gentleman of quiet manners and engaging address, who paid strict attention to the duties of his profession. He was preeminent a self made man, came to New York when only twelve years old, since which time his course in life has apparently been successful. At the time of his death he held several prominent and honorary positions in the dental profession.—He was honorary member of the Philadelphia Medical Society, member of the Medical society of the City and County of New York, member of the New York Historical and Statistical society; and also one of the Directors of the Artisan's Bank, an Institution which was partly founded by his influence, and in which he was a stockholder to the amount of $25,000.

Dr. Burdell was a skillful member of the Dental profession, and was much interested in getting up the Dental Conventions which have late been held in Philadelphia. He was well built, strong and muscular; and the appearance of his room where he was found, shows that his murderers had to deal with a desperate resistance on his part.

The fact of the murder of such a man could be perpetrated without the knowledge of the inmates of the house, seems hardly credible, and yet, though they have been taken into custody and undergone a very rigid examination before the coroner's jury nothing as yet has been produced sufficient to convict them, as participants in a crime of such magnitude.

It is greatly to be hoped that every exertion will be made to detect and bring to justice the guilty parties whoever they may be, particularly as the frequent occurrence, at night does not fatigue me; on the contrary, it rests me. I am never so fresh in the morning as when I have dispensed with sleep. Who is the portrait for? Who ordered it? It was not I, was it? "No, sire, it is intended for the Marquis of Douglas." "What, David," returned the Emperor, scowling, "is it to be given to an Englishman?" "Sir, he is one of your Majesty's greatest admirers, and is perhaps the most sincere living appreciator of French artists." "Next to me," replied Napoleon, tartly. After a moment, he added, "David, I will buy the portrait myself." "Sir, it is already sold." David, I desire the portrait, I say; I will give thirty thousand francs for it." "Your Majesty, I cannot chafe its destination," said David, indicating by a descriptive gesture, that he had already been paid. "David," exclaimed Napoleon, "this portrait shall not be sent to England, do you hear? I will return your Marquis his money?" "Surely your Majesty would not dishonor me?" stammered the artist, at the same time noticing that the Emperor, having exhausted his oration, was preparing for active intercession. "No, certainly; but what will I not do, either, to allow the enemies of France to possess me in their country, even on canvas?" So saying, he directed a sturdy kick at the painting, and the imperial foot passed vigorously through it. Without a word, he quitted the apartment, leaving a wonderstricken audience behind him. David had the picture carried back to his studio, and subsequently mended and restored it, and forwarded it to its owner. It is likely that the merit of the portrait, as a work of art and as a likeness, is now somewhat lost in the superior attractions of the patched rent, and that its value is considerably greater as a momento of His Majesty's wrath, than as a specimen of the skill of his artist-in-ordinary!"—Goodrich's Count of Napoleon.

The lecture of Bishop Clarke and others.

The recent eloquent lecture at the Aquidneck Hall by Bishop Clarke on the "Body and Soul" was a beautiful and truthful exposition of the theory of "modern spiritualism" as far as it relates to the function and connection of the fleshly and spiritual body, and the continuous existence of the latter in what the Bishop so happily designated the "Spirit Land." Indeed so exactly did the Bishop's ideas on these momentous questions harmonize with the declared and published doctrines of Andrew Jackson Davis, Judge Edmonds and other eminent exponents of "Spiritualism" that it was difficult for some hearers who were well read in the authors alluded to, to believe that the gifted lecturer had not drunk inspiration from these pages or was unconsciously more directly inspired by the same disembodied spirits who assisted in giving them forth.

The latter supposition is rendered the more probable from the fact that on Sunday afternoon the disquisition of the same subject commenced at about the stage where the Bishop had left it was resumed at the State House through the mediumship of Mrs. Henderson a "trance speaking medium," by what purported to be the spirit of Roger Williams and continued in the evening by a spirit claiming to have been known on Earth as Samuel Stratton. The earnest and respectful attention with which the eloquent spirit messengers were listened to by the audience which was literally packed early in the evening showed how deeply interesting were the words that fell from the lips of the medium, compareable in their subduing and refreshing power to the descending dew of heaven, which through its gentle influences causes not only the storm torn branches of the sturdy oak to revive but the least and humblest flower of the vale though crushed and bleeding at every pore once more to lift its struggling head in hope and joy.

It would seem from the character of the lectures already pronounced that they are intended by the controlling spirits to be a complete exposition and explanation of both the science and religious character of "Spiritualism." If, so it is to be hoped that all sincere seekers after truth will avail themselves of the opportunity to ascertain for themselves the true objects from a source that may at least be as reliable as any information that can be obtained from the avowed enemies of the new or rather renewed dispensation, or the proverbially dubious paragraphs that are floating about in the newspapers of the day. It was announced that the next lecture through the mediumship of Mrs. Henderson will be given at Acquidneck Hall at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening the 11th inst.

T. R. H.

Through the politeness of Mr. Kerney, we learn that the Steamer State of Maine, which left New York yesterday for Fall River and Newport, was stopped by the ice near Hurl Gare. She will probably return when the tide changes.

Also that the Steamer Perry is fully prepared to give battle to the ice and will use her best endeavors to get here to-day. She will leave Providence at 2 o'clock P. M.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, MOND Y Fe. 7.

Senate.—On motion of Mr. Russel, a motion was adopted, calling on the Secretary of the Treasury to repair a statement of the duties remitted on railroad iron, designating the time of remission, and on what roads also the duties refunded, with like designation.

Mr. Weller, from the committee on military affairs, reported back with amendments to the House bill to increase the pay of army officers, saying that he could ask for its consideration early next week.

Mr. Bigler presented nineteen memorials from merchants and others of Philadelphia, praying for the adoption of measures for increasing the trade between the United States and Africa.

Mr. Seward presented three memorials from the same city also on that same subject.

The memorials were referred to the committee on commerce.

Mr. Tombs presented a memorial from Gen. Shields and other citizens of Minnesota, setting forth that although that Territory contains about 200,000 inhabitants, yet it has received no grants of lands in conformity with the policy of the government, to grant lands upon certain conditions to new States for railroad purposes.

Several private bills were then passed.

Adjourned.

House.—The House passed the bill establishing the Delaware, Osage and Western land district in Kansas.

On motion of Mr. Orr, a resolution was passed giving the widow of Preston S. Brooks whatever sum was due him at the time of his death.

The bill reported from the committee on public lands authorizing the Delaware and Otautawatic Indians in Kansas to sell the right of way for railroads, was tabled.

The House passed the bill to establish the office of Surveyor General in Minnesota.

The bill for completing the capital of Nebraska, and one of a similar character for New Mexico, passed.

A bill appropriating $30,000 for roads in Nebraska was also passed.

The House passed the bill appropriating $300,000 for the construction of a wagon road from Fort Kearney in Nebraska via the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains to the eastern boundary line of Honey Lake, the said road to connect with and form an extension of the road already authorized from Fort Ridgely to the fore-mentioned town.

It was difficult for some hearers who were to find an unreasonable strong objection to charging myself with money responsibilities of any kind, even to suit the convenience of my dearest friends. As soon as I was left alone the very sight of the pocket-book behind the glass-door of the book-case began to worry me; and instead of returning to my work, I puzzled my brains about finding a place to lock it up in, where it would not be exposed to the view of any chance passengers who might stray into the Black Cottage.

This was not an easy matter to compass in a poor house like ours, where we had nothing valuable to put under lock and key. After running over various hiding-places in my mind, I thought of my tea-caddy, a present from Mrs. Knitton, which I always kept out of harm's way in my own bedroom. Most unluckily—as it afterward turned out—instead of taking the pocket-book to the tea-caddy, I went into my room first to take the tea-caddy to the pocket-book. I only acted in this roundabout way from sheer thoughtlessness, and severely enough I was punished for it, as you will acknowledge yourself when you have read a page or two of my story.

I was just getting the unlucky tea-caddy out of my cupboard, when I heard footsteps in the passage, and running out immediately, saw two men walk into the kitchen—the room in which I had received Mr. and Mrs. Knitton. I inquired what they wanted sharply enough, and one of them answered immediately that they wanted my father.—He turned, of course as he spoke, and I recognized him as a stone-mason, going among his comrades by the name of Shifty Dick. He bore a very bad character for every thing but wrestling—a sport for which the working-men of our parts were famous all through the country. Shifty Dick was champion, and he had got his name from some tricks in wrestling for which he was celebrated. He was a tall, heavy man, with a lowering, scared face, and his hairy hands—the last visitor in the whole world that I should have been glad to see under any circumstances. His companion was a stranger, whom he addressed by the name of Jerry—a quick, dapper, wicked looking little man, who took off his cap to me with most politeness, and showed, in so doing, a bald head with some very ugly-looking knobs on it. I distrusted him worse than I did Shifty Dick, and managed to get between his leering eyes and the book-case, as I told the two that my father was gone out, and that I did not expect him back till the next day.

EMPEROR AND ARTIST.—One David painted for the English Marquis of Douglas a standing portrait of Napoleon, of the size of life. He was accustomed to paint the Imperial features without requiring Napoleon's personal attendance. The Emperor, therefore, knew nothing of this portrait till it was brought one day to the Tuilleries for his inspection. It represented his Majesty in his cabinet, as he had risen from his desk after a night spent in writing—a circumstance indicated by candles burning in their sockets.

LIMITED.—The well known Maryland Consolidated Lotteries, of which R. FRANCIS & Co. are the managers, are chartered by the state of Maryland, and a committee elected by the people, who is sworn to superintend and certify that everything connected with them is done in a strictly honorable manner, and that the interests of parties who reside at a distance are as well protected as if they themselves were present at the drawing. Another fact which the managers call attention to, is, that all persons have a legal right to send orders for tickets to Maryland, as lotteries are legalized by special law in that state. A lottery is drawn every day in the month. If no particular class is named, orders are filled in the first drawing to take place after the communication comes to hand. The prices of tickets vary from $1.00 to $200. No tickets however, sent unless the money for the same is received with the order. The drawings are upon the principle of one number on each ticket (after the Havana plan), and Terinary combination. Prizes vary in amount from $200 to $10,000. All orders for tickets or packages will receive prompt attention, and the drawing mailed to all purchasers immediately after it is over. Address T. HUBBARD & Co., No. 39 Fayerweather-st., or Box No. 16, Baltimore, Maryland.

CORRUPTION IN CONGRESS.—The Cincinnati Gazette says:

"A gentleman who never was a member of Congress, but who was connected with the Colgate Company as stockholder, and was thoroughly acquainted with all the ropes told us that it cost the Company $450,000, to secure the appropriation referred to by the Boston Journal; that most of the members who voted for the appropriation were bribed or bought, or corrupted, or influenced, or whatever term may be applied to the operation of securing votes by purchase. The facts were communicated to us without any injunction to secrecy, but we would not feel at liberty to divulge the name of the author without his consent. We will say this much, however, that if we should name the gentleman in the Gazette, very few men in or out of Congress would doubt the statement."

PURGATIVE, &c., May 1, 1856.

Dr. J. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache my body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Sir: I have used your Pills, and found them to be the best cathartics we employ. Their regularizing effect on the liver, kidneys and bladder, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have removed from a case of bilious disease so far that it did not readily yield to them.

MISSISSIPPI, Beaver Bonnets, selling at No. 7 Westminister-st, Providence, for one dollar a piece, by [REDACTED] G. R. WHIPPLE.

MEMPHIS, TENN. SAVANNAH, GA., July 6, 1856.

Dr. AYER. Sir: I should be grateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not repeat my thanks. I have a cold settled in my head, and am suffering from a sore throat, and am unable to speak. My doctor said I had a chronic rheumatism, and I had to give up all my work. Now I have the best of physicians, the disease goes away and away, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. These effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

FRANCIS CHAMBER, BABY HOUSE, L. 5 Dec., 1855.

Dr. AYER. Sir: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years.

VINCENT SHELL.

For Droisy, Pectoral, or Kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Diarrhea Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Pills, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been relieved by the alternative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in child health, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its unadvised use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.
